GOV. BROWN'S BLAST.

He Scores the Ohio Judge Buckwater.

Gov. John Young Brown roasts the Ohio Judge Buckwater, who refused to surrender the negro murderer, Hampton on a requisition issued by Governor Brown on Gov. McKinley. Gov. Brown says of Buckwater: "He should have seen it executed and the statements of the Judge are grossly inadequate and his arguments mere subterfuge and quibble."

"He has usurped the prerogatives of the Governor of his own State, and deliberately refused to execute the plain command of the law of the United States, and has subordinated it to his own caprice."

"He has reproached Kentucky for crime, from which his own great State is not quiescent. He accepted the statements of a fugitive from justice, that he feared unlawful violence if he returned to Kentucky as sufficient reason for his discharge."

"The Statutes of Ohio, in so far as they prescribe methods and conditions supplementary to and inconsistent with the United States law of extradition must be admitted to be void. This proposition no one disputes."

"No lawyer claims that Judge Buckwater's decision is sustained by any precedent in the country, and it followed by the Judiciary of Ohio, it will make that State a refuge and a paradise for all the murderers, thieves and rapists of the South, and is an invitation and assurance of welcome and protection given by the proclamation of Buckwater."

Circuit Court will convene next Monday. The docket will be as follows:

Judge Cooper will doubtless emphasize in his instructions to the Grand Jury their duty, matters need looking into and the Grand Jury must be held in the discharge of their work. The law is too slack. There are no better people than Montgomery's and yet there are within our borders some very bad men, men who are murderers and it is with the Grand Jury whether or not they are brought before the court. We can not hope to be prosperous with our present unenviable name for lawlessness.

Mr. W. S. Lloyd, druggist, is editing an interesting space in the Advocate, and if our friends wish to keep up with the numerous contemplations for this year they must read every issue. His many preparations will be brought into notice, and the thousands of dollars sent away annually will find a home lodgment. He will meet every want. Read this week's advertisement.

On Saturday the Fiscal Court of Montgomery county offered a reward of $100 for information that will lead to the conviction of the parties engaged in the lynching of Thomas Blair on January 1, at this place. Good for our County Judge and our Magistrates.

Judge Irving Haisley, of the Stock Farm, Lexington, was in the city last week and received a cordial greeting from his many friends. Judge Haisley has proven himself great among horsemen, being thoroughly posted in all breeds.

We are in receipt of a large calendar from the Blue Grass Building & Loan Company, together with a statement of their business. The company makes a fine showing with a large business.

Mike Curry and Miss Nellie Garrison were married at the home of the bride's father W. H. Garrison on the 9th instant. Elder B. W. Trimble officiated.

The meetings that were to have been held at the First Presbyterian church last week, have been indefinitely postponed on account of the sudden change in the weather.

"An Indignation Meeting."

In answer to a call issued for a mass meeting of the citizens of Montgomery county to protest against the late disorders in our midst, and to put the good people of Montgomery on record as against those disorders, a large crowd of representative citizens assembled at the Court-house, notwithstanding the inclement weather yesterday afternoon.

L. T. Chiles was made Chairman and the local representatives of the press Secretaries. After speeches by several parties a committee, consisting of Rev. C. J. Nugent, County Judge E. C. O'Rear and Messrs. J. G. Trimble and J. G. Lane were appointed on Resolutions. The Committee presented the following which were adopted:

"Whereas, Various disorders in violation of the law have occurred in our midst, including the late lynching and

Whereas, The said disorders have created the impression that our people are not a law-abiding people, but give countenance to and thus encourage crimes and misdemeanors, therefore

Resolved, That we protest against such an imputation upon the good name of our community and emphatically denounce such disorders and crimes as have led to such unjust inferences.

Resolved, That we heartily approve the offering of a reward by the Governor and the County Court for the arrest and conviction of the parties to the late cruel lynching, which took place in our city.

Resolved, That we urge the officers of the law to use every legal effort to purge our people free of causes for deeds for which they are no wise responsible.

Resolved, That we will give every encouragement and our free support to all our authorities in their efforts to discover and punish criminals.

Resolved, That we recommend the appointment of a Committee of ten citizens who shall have authority to call the people together in mass-meeting whenever they judge best and who shall be charged with the duty of actively assisting the officers in discovering crimes and enforcing the law.

Resolved, That we request the Grand Jury to make a most rigid and searching investigation into the late lynching and all other disorders in our community.

The meeting was addressed by a number of gentlemen, among them Col. A. T. Wood, Rev. C. J. Nugent, A. J. Arriek and Judge Keller.

Common Sense

Should be used in attempting to cure that very disagreeable disease, catarrh. As catarrh originates in impurities in the blood, local application can do no permanent good. The common sense method of treatment is to purify the blood, and for this purpose there is no preparation superior to Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Hood's Pills cure constipation by restoring peristalsis action to the alimentary canal.

Mrs. Mary Campbell, wife of Barney Campbell died at her home on Saturday afternoon after a long illness of consumption. Mrs. Campbell was about 40 years of age and leaves four small children to the care of a bereaved husband. The funeral was conducted by Father Healy at the Catholic church on Monday morning at 10 o'clock. Burial in St. Patrick's Cemetery.

It is a fact that the Mississippi lands which was sold by the Columbia Finance and Trust Company, trustees of the New Farmers' Bank for $7,000, has been secured for $75,000. We have heard such a rumor and we mention it that those interested in the matter may investigate for themselves.

ED. C. O'REAR,

P. J. M. C. C.

On last Sunday morning Mrs. Margaret, wife of William C. Helwig died from the effects of pneumonia, aged 28 years. She was a member of the Antioch Christian church and was married four years ago. She leaves a husband and two children, John, aged two years and Pauline five months. She was taken violently ill on the third day of this month with pneumonia which so reduced her strength that she could not stand other complications that set up. Her funeral was preached at the residence Monday afternoon by Elder B. W. Trimble assisted by Rev. C. J. Nugent after which she was buried in Macpherson Cemetery. This is a sad death, a mother in young womanhood to be stricken down leaving little ones to be brought up. The ways of God are past finding out, but they are wise and we should meekly bow to his dispensation.

The husband must realize that she has gone before and the same road must pass. His duty here is to follow the directions of the master working for God and bringing up the little ones left to his charge so that they may become valuable acquisitions.

Mrs. Helwig was an excellent woman, a Christian, and when the minister talked to her concerning her dissolution she said she would delight to assist in the rearing of her children but that God would do what was right. An excellent spirit submitted to the will of God. She was the daughter of Sanford Powers and was raised in this county. All Christian people tender their sympathy to the bereaved husband, little ones and other relatives.

To the Public School Teachers.

Georgetown College, appreciating the earnest desire of the teachers of the Public Schools to fit themselves in the best manner possible for their work, decided last June to open a Normal Department for the last half of this Scholastic year. I am glad to announce now to all teachers that instruction in that Department will begin Jan. 22, the opening of the Spring term of the College. The instruction will be in charge of the Faculty of the College and will be thorough and in keeping with the best modern methods. Dr. Rucker will have charge of Mathematics, Dr. Yager, Civil Government, Dr. Eastwood, Natural Sciences, Miss Pollard, History, Prof. Pulliam, English Grammar and general Normal methods. In addition to the Normal course the teachers may avail themselves of the advantages of any or all classes in the College, and in this way fit themselves, if desired, for advanced work. For this year it has been decided that no tuition fee will be charged. It is hoped that many teachers will avail themselves of this opportunity. Good boarding can be had in the town for three dollars a month and a half per week. The College boarding halls are now full, or still better rates could be offered.

Correspondence with teachers is most earnestly solicited. For further information in reference to the Normal Course or College, address
A. C. DAVIDSON, President,

The heavy fall of snow and rain last Thursday throughout the Ohio valley and above Pittsburgh has caused all the larger tributaries of the Ohio river to rise rapidly again. Another flood is expected at Pittsburgh, and at Wheeling the river is booming. Let river men do not anticipate much of a rise, but the weather man predicts otherwise. At Indianapolis the fall of snow was the heaviest in years, measuring about twelve inches and will coming down.

The friends of the Currency Bill have returned to Washington in sufficient number to put the measure through the House, and another attempt may be made to-day. Friends of the bill have surrendered none of their determination to secure some currency legislation if possible.

Blood Hounds.

The Elizabethtown News last week published a likeness of Marshal Neighbors' two blood hounds, Drum and Little Dick, that have recently become famous throughout the State from their excellent work in hunting criminals. The smallest of the two, says the News, is Drum, the old dog. He is pure bred and one of the best of his stock in the United States. It was by the unerring instinct of this animal for the human scent that J. Commodore Miller, the negro that outraged and then murdered the Ray sisters, near Bardwell, Ky., was trailed into Illinois and captured. Soaked Grain.

Mr. W. P. Prewitt says, in the Richmond Register, that three bushels of soaked corn are worth four of dry corn for feeding milk cows. He has tried it. Last summer he paid 60 cents for corn and 45 cents for wheat. He bought 40 bushels of wheat, soaked it, fed it to his cows and horses, and it fed equally as far as the same quantity of corn would go, and the stock did better. Forty bushels of corn would have cost $24; the same amount of wheat cost $18, which nets a saving of $6 and a better result to the stock. Mr. Prewitt advises the farmers to feed their wheat and sell their corn while the prices are on the latter.

JUST A WORD.

In the midst of life's reverses,
When the pathway all seems dark,
When a midnight, still, sad, gloom,
Falls by pleasure's falsest spark;
When deep gloom and sad foreboding
Clouds their within its rays,
And the soul is filled with longing
Working till like evil chasms,
When thy later all seems chaos,
And existence one great pain,
Joy and hope are fast forever
And to struggle on we vain.

Do some tender deed of mercy
To a soul with sorrow laden,
Give the hand of loving kindness
In some helpful little aid,
That one dead thy soul will lighten,
And thy heavy burden will lift,
Through the blackest cloud and night,
—Good HURD.

MR. HURD'S HOLIDAY.

"No business tomorrow, my dear," Mr. Hurd announced cheerfully to his better half as he stepped into the sitting room and deposited several brown paper bundles upon one of the chairs.

"Why, to be sure," she responded, brightening up. "I had almost forgotten that it will be a holiday. What are you going to do to celebrate? I suppose that we might all go off somewhere for the day," she concluded thoughtfully.

Mr. Hurd shook his head. "There are a number of things about the house which I am intending to look into tomorrow; it is only a few days ago that you were complaining that I was not more domestic, so now I am going to turn out as good as I can."

He came to the conclusion that he was constantly paying out money to incompetent workmen for little odd jobs that he could just as well do myself. Any man with brains and the proper tools can do a great many dollars' worth of work in his spare moments," he went on as he removed the paper wrappers from the several bundles.

"Are you sure that you are feeling as well as usual, Theodore?" his wife inquired, watching him in anxious astonishment while she recalled her many fruitless efforts in the past to awaken in him a desire to help about some slight household detail which needed attention.

"Never better, my dear," he answered, unrolling a bottle of glue and setting it upon the mantelpiece.

"Why do you ask?"

"Well, you see, Theodore, it is such a new departure for you that I— I couldn't help wondering if—"

"Well, if what?"

"If anything were the matter—if you were quite as good as paint and a brush, which he sat down next to the glue. "I'll tell you just how it happened, my dear," he said. "On my way down town this morning I found, as we walked along together I asked him casually how he was going to spend tomorrow. 'As I usually spend my holidays,' he replied, in replying and tinkering with things about the house and doing my best to freeze out the carpenter and the plumber, besides sorting over old papers and putting things to rights that I seldom have a chance to do. After I left him I began to think how many holidays I had wasted when I might have been really accomplishing something and have had money in my pocket to boot."

"I have returned, my dear," he concluded, opening the last of the paper bundles. "as you see, I am not a fool. Here are half a dozen new tools which I find I need if I am to do anything of the sort really well. Isn't that a nice little hammer? And you remember that we had an awl or screwdriver that a man could properly work with."

Mrs. Hurd gazed at her husband, while tears rose to her eyes. "You are a dear," she said huskily. "You have realized one of my dearest hopes. With all your faults, you have always been far ahead of other men, and now—now I am almost afraid you are too perfect. You're sure that you do feel quite well and haven't any sharp pain darting through your chest?"

The following morning Mr. Hurd began to carry out his good resolutions immediately after breakfast, and when the younger children urged him to go for a walk, he informed them that "father had some very important work to do, but that they might watch him if they liked."

Mrs. Hurd met him soon afterward mounting the attic stairs, followed by a procession of willing helpers.

"Where are you going, Theodore?" she inquired.

"It is a long time since we had the tank cleaned out," he responded, "and I see no need of paying an incompetent and expensive plumber, who brings around and looks at him, for doing a simple thing like that."

"Very well, dear," his wife said encouragingly, only are you sure that you understand all about it?"

"Of course I do," he replied a trifle indignantly, and Mrs. Hurd, realizing that she ought to have more confidence in him than to suspect his possibility, retired meekly to her room, where she quietly settled herself for her embroidery. "It is such a comfort to have Theodore interested in these little household matters," she murmured contentedly.

"It is an education to the children, too," she meditated as she listened to them running up and down stairs to bring their father's first one thing after another and heard his voice from above instructing them to start all the faucets running in the bathroom and to bring him a pail and two or three sponges.

In the course of five minutes her youngest son appeared at her elbow. "What is, Johnnie?" she questioned.

"Father wants his other pair of glasses," he announced; "he's just smashed his best ones."

"What those beautiful new pebbles?" Mrs. Hurd cried regretfully. "How did it happen?"

"Oh, he was just looking down into the tank, and they dropped off and struck on a piece of lead pipe," Johnnie answered, skipping gaily away with the other pair of glasses. To him these little casualties added greatly to the enjoyment of the occasion.

In a short space of time a rap at Mrs. Hurd's door caused her to look up from her work. In the doorway stood the cook, apparently much agitated. "Oh, mum," she gasped breathlessly, "somebody's leakin'. Will yez come down to the kitchen? Sure as the ceilin's all wet an' drippin down on me."

Mrs. Hurd sprang up. "They must have let the bathtub overflow," she exclaimed. "Come, we must all turn to with mops, cloths and all the sponges we can get hold of."

"I suppose you know, Theodore," she called to him, "that you've been called up stairs, adding, 'quick, Johnny, bring me down all those sponges this very minute.'"

As Johnny came leisurely down stairs with the kitchen sponges, he remarked gleefully: "Pa couldn't clean it out much of any, after all. He says that no one but the plumber can get tools into the past to do any dollars' worth of work in his spare moments," he went on as he removed the paper wrappers from the several bundles.

CLONKS LETTERS.

And Away, Marked "Important and Uninteresting."

When Napoleon arrived at Ajaccio and after an absence of eight years found himself again with his family, things were as bad as they could be. Not one of the old French officials remained. The diplomatic leniency of the first occupation was giving place to the official stringency of a firmer administration. Proportionately the disaffection of the patriots among the people was slowly developing into a widespread discontent. Joseph, the hereditary head of a family which had been thoroughly French in conduct and was supposed to be so in sentiment, which at least looked to the king for further favors, was still a staunch royalist. Having been repulsed in his Tuscan ambitions, he could open no other connection with Italy than a mercenary one, which was scarcely enable him to engage in the oil trade. The modest beginning was about to be made. It was high time, for the only support of his mother and her children in the failure of her noble berry plantations, was the income of the old ardeurion, who was now confined to his room and growing feebler every day under attacks of gout.

The behavior of the pale, feverish, masterful young lieutenant was far from praiseworthy. He filled the house with his new fangled philosophy and assumed a self importance in air. Among the letters which he wrote was one to the renowned Dr. Tissot of Lausanne, referring to his correspondent's interest in Paoli and asking advice concerning the treatment of the canon's gout. The famous physician never answered, and the absurd epistle was found among his papers marked "uninteresting."

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

For Railroad Commissioner.

We are authorized to announce John C. Wood as a candidate for Railroad Commissioner, for the Eastern District of Kentucky, subject to the action of the Republican party.

During the year 1894 there were 170 lynchings in the United States. Of these 168 were in the Southern States and 24 in the Northern States. The largest number were in Georgia, being 20. Kentucky and Alabama come next with 19 each. Is it not time we were doing something to remedy this evil? To what purpose is it that we organize an immigration bureau in our State so long as this state of affairs exists? People will not seek such a place for a home, unless they can find no other. If they are seeking for peace, prosperity and security.

If we desire to induce others to come to Kentucky to live we must be able to furnish them with good government and an assurance of safety to themselves and their families. We must be able to assure them that no body of men shall dare to attack them at night, even if they should be under sentence for a violation of the law, and execute them.

We must search out and punish all violators of the law, no matter whether that violation has been by individuals or by a company of men. Until we do so we might as well "hang our harps on the willows," or seek to silence the rocks of Gibraltar to move from their places as to try to induce lovers of law and order, (and God knows we want no others) to cast their lot among us.

The Governor of the State has offered a reward of $400 and the Montgomery County Court has offered an additional reward of $100 for the detection of the members of the mob who hung Thomas Blair at this place on New Year's morning. It is to be hoped that this offer of $500 will be inducement sufficient to bring the perpetrators of this foul crime to justice. This looks as if the State and county are waking up to a realizing sense of the shameful disregard of law that has too often been exhibited in our midst. We have not a reasonable suspicion as to who the guilty parties are, but of one thing we are well-assured and that is, if this community is to have any prospect of peace and safety, it is necessary that the dangerous spirit of mob violence shall be relentlessly stamped out in our midst. Let the guilty suffer the merited punishment of their dastardly crime that the community may have some assurance of peace and security in the future.

Gov. Matthews read in person his biennial message to the Indiana Legislature. He asks for legislation to close the Roby race track; for more convicts at funds available for the militia, and for legislation permitting the Governor to remove negligent Sheriffs and to proceed against violators of the public morals and public policy. He recommends a further reduction of the tax rate; a modification of the tax law to reach paid-up stock in building and loan associations; a law to prohibit price fixing; the construction of a ship canal from Lake Michigan to the Ohio river. Senator Wray introduced a bill to prevent officials from accepting railroad passes.

After talking hopefully for a day of reviving the Currency Bill, the Democratic leaders in the House now recognize the apparent impossibility of accomplishing anything in the way of financial legislation at this session. Bills on this line were introduced in the Senate by Mr. Vest and Mr. McPherson, but they are not expected to go further. Renewed talk of an extra session is heard, but this is considered impossible, as the attitude of the silver Senators makes it doubtful whether the new Congress could succeed where this one has failed.

Representative Goodnight said that the Judiciary Committee of the House would soon have a day to consider several bills reported by the committee last summer and now on the calendar, among which is the Goodnight Bill to divide Kentucky into two judicial districts. The latter bill will get through the House, but will not get through the Senate.

One million dollars in gold was withdrawn from the Sub-treasury at New York Thursday for export Saturday, and $1,000,000 more was taken out Friday.

Wholesome Advice to Tobacco Men.

(BY WILLIAM E. BEAN.)

My advice to farmers is not to ship their tobacco at the present time. The market is glutted with low grades and medium tobaccos.

A fine crop only will sell well now and then, but there are too chances to one that it will be overlooked in the great quantities that are being forced upon the market. The buyers are protesting against such heavy sales, but the Warehousemen are making money by it, and continue to put up about 1,000 hds. daily. The sales continue from 8:30 a. m. to 7:30 p. m. viz: 8 hours or 480 minutes, taking out the time to go from one warehouse to another, it leaves less than 15 seconds for the sale of each hoghead. Under such circumstances how can sellers expect anything but a wholesale butchery of prices. I had a hoghead of red leaf that cost me $5.50 here, sell for $2.55 there. There are hundreds of good hogheads of red leaf selling for between $5 and $7, yet these are not written up in the papers.

There are hogheads being sold in both markets that are actually not paying shipping and sale expenses, therefore heed not these tobacco drummers, who are urging you to hurry your tobacco into market, all they want is their commission, and they don't care whether your tobacco is given away or not. If you cannot sell at home, bulk your tobacco, lock your barns, forget you have it, until the middle of April. Then hang it up until it sweats in case and gets in keeping order; buyers will then take hold for they can keep it then as long as they wish. If they put it in hogheads now they are forced to sell it in a short time.

Mrs. Nannie E. Bates, wife of Mr. Samuel Bates, died at her home in this city, on Sunday morning, Jan. 13, 1895, aged 59 years. Mrs. Bates was Miss Nannie E. Annis, and was married to Mr. Samuel Bates in 1866. Four children were born to them, two of whom are living: Mrs. A. D. Thomas, of Evansville, Indiana, and Wm. Bates, of Paducah, Ky., both of whom were with their mother in her last illness. Several years since Mrs. Bates suffered an attack of La Grippe, from the effects of which she never completely recovered. Some months since she had a stroke of paralysis, but the immediate cause of her death was heart failure, superinduced by a brain trouble. Mrs. Bates was a model wife, mother and friend and a true and noble woman. She was a faithful and consistent member of the Christian church and died as she had lived, a Christian.

Her son, William, and her daughter, Mrs. Cora Thomas, were summoned from their homes to attend the bedside of the dying mother, who loved them so well and who enjoyed to an unusual extent their love. They made her last wishes, and could be by when she was taking her farewell of earth. For the stricken husband upon whom the blow falls with such fearful weight, the sympathy of a wide circle of friends goes out in deepest sympathy. The funeral service will be held at the family residence on East High street this morning at 10 o'clock and will be conducted by Elders W. H. Harding and B. W. Trimble. The burial will take place at Crown Hill Cemetery, sharpshoeburg.

Whatever the state department does is always wrong, in the eyes of the republican editors, than anything else it could do. They have been yelling for a vigorous foreign policy, and when Secretary Gresham gives it to them in his Spanish policy they denounce it as violently as they ever denounced his conservative Hawaiian policy. The "Americanism" of the party which boasts so loudly of its Americanism consists to-day mainly of blind, bitter hatred of a man who had the independence to leave the republican party when it no longer represented his political principles.—Louisville Courier Journal.

Republican editors, who are writing able leaders headed "Populism Doomed" in one column do not allow a little thing like that keep them from using the next column for rejoicing over victories they and the populists in combination have won over the "boobies" in the south.—N. Y. World.

Scurfula Thoroughly Eradicated.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.: "It is with pleasure that I give you the details of our little May's sickness and her return to health by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla. She was taken down with Fever and a Bad Cough.

Following, this a sore came on her right side between the two lower ribs. In a short time another broke on the left side. She would take spells of sore mouth and when we had succeeded in expelling this she would suffer with attacks of high fever and expel bloody looking corruption. Her head was affected and matter oozed from her ears. After each attack she had taken three bottles. Now she looks like

BEASTS THAT TUMBLE UPWARD.

Deep Sea Fish Faces a Danger Unknown to Other Living Things.

It is only reasonable to suppose that the ability to sustain an enormous pressure can only be acquired by animals after generations of gradual migrations from shallow waters. Those forms that are brought up by the dredge from the depths of the ocean are usually killed and crushed out of shape were they suddenly plunged into very deep water.

The fish that live at these enormous depths are, in consequence of the enormous pressure, liable to a curious form of accident. If in chasing their prey or for any other reason they rise to a considerable distance above the floor of the ocean, the gases of their swimming bladder become considerably expanded, and their specific gravity very greatly reduced. Up to a certain limit the muscles of their bodies can counteract the tendency to float upward and enable the fish to regain its proper sphere of life at the bottom, but beyond that limit the muscles are not strong enough to drive the body downward, and the fish, becoming more and more distended as it goes, is gradually killed on its long and involuntary journey to the surface of the sea.

The deep-sea fish, then, are exposed to a danger that no other animals in the world are subject to—namely, that of tumbling upward. That such accidents do occasionally occur is evidenced by the fact that some fish, which are now known to be true deep-sea forms, were discovered dead floating on the surface of the ocean long before our modern investigations were commenced.—Popular Science Monthly.

He Died on Coke.

It is alleged, in a memoir of the life of Lord Eldon, that when plain John Scott his zeal for knowledge was so great that he abandoned the pursuit of almost every kind of information and never sacrificed a moment from his legal studies beyond what was absolutely necessary for his health.

His brother William (afterward Lord Stowell), with a view of engaging him to meet Dr. Johnson and other men of distinguished literary talent, would sometimes say:

"Where do you dine today?"

To this question John's uniform answer was, "I dine on Coke today."

William would then denounce with a "Nay, but come to my chambers. You'll see the doctor."

Whereupon John argued concerning the doctor. "He can't draw a bill," and so the friendly suit ended. It is further stated, on the best authority, that it was an amusement in the early legal life of John Scott to turn pieces of poetry into the form of legal instruments, and that he actually converted the ballad of the "Chevy Chase" into the shape and style of a bill of chancery.—Sala's Journal.

The Judge's Stuttering Story.

Many anecdotes are remembered of the late Judge Thompson of Gloucester. Thompson was a good story teller and had the gift of stuttering, which helps along a story teller wonderfully. Judge Thompson always came up to the Democratic state conventions, which used to be held each year in Worcester, and was always primed with good stories.

On one such occasion, the night before the convention, in the Bay State House, he was one of a group of men in the lobby exchanging the latest stories, when a newcomer to that circle broke in with, "I say, judge, tell that stuttering story you told in the cars coming up." The man was a stranger to the judge up to that time and had only met him for a few minutes in the train from Boston. As the judge never could by any possibility tell a story that was not a "stuttering story," this unmediated joke was considered the best thing said that evening.—Worcester (Mass.) Gazette.

Crown of an Irish King.

One of the most highly prized relics in the British museum, that great storehouse of wonders and curiosities, both natural and artificial, is the crown formerly used by the Irish kings in the coronation exercises which made them monarchs of the Emerald Isle. Strictly speaking, they were two of these Irish crowns, the one in question being that used by the MacMurroughs, a family who were anciently kings of Leinster. This regal relic, all that remains of the old Irish monarchy, is a plain gold band, rising to a kind of peak or point in front. It dates back to the middle of the tenth century.—St. Louis Republic.

Why Wolfskins are Cheap.

The Eskimos of the arctic practice an ingenious method of slaughtering wolves—planting a stake in the ice with a blade of flint fastened to the upper end. About the flint blade they wrap a piece of blubber, which freezes hard. Presently along come some wolves and catch the bait. They walk until the edge of the flint cut their tongues. Tasting their own blood, they become frantic and attack each other, the fight continuing until the wolf pack lies dead. Next day the arctic hunter comes along and skins them. That is one reason why wolf-skin rugs are so cheap.—Iron Age.

WINTER CARE OF TACKLE.

Little Precautions With Rod, Reel and Line That Will Retain the Angler.

"It is a source of great surprise to me," said a veteran angler, "to find that some men have any tackle at all left over from the preceding year when I see the careless way in which they treat it. Rods are dumped haphazardly into some secret corner, often dry and hot enough to warp a telegraph pole. Lines still wet from the last day's fishing are tossed into an envelope to mildew or are left to rot on the reels. The reels themselves, put away damp, uncleaned and without oil, are of course bound to rust and give poor service the following season. Hooks are tumbled in with the damp line, the steel fish corroded, put away damp, uncleaned and without oil, are of course bound to rust and give poor service the following season. Hooks are tumbled in with the damp line, the steel fish corroded, put away damp, uncleaned and without oil, are of course bound to rust and give poor service the following season.

"Now, all this can be and should be avoided. An hour or so of care at the end of the season will insure the preservation of rods, reels and lines. Every rod joint should be carefully straightened before it is put up for the winter. The tips especially are bound to be more or less set from the constant downward strain. The remedy for this is to lay them on a flat board and tack leather strips across, holding them down to the plane surface. By keeping them damp a few days you can readily warp them into proper shape.

"Next give a good rubbing down with a mixture of powdered pumice and sweet oil to take off the cracked and broken surface of the old varnish, and then two thorough coats of thin varnish, allowing plenty of time for the first coat to dry before applying the second. You must always look to see that the guides and whipping are complete and in good order and repair any frayed or loose ones before putting on the preservative. This dressing fills all the pores of the wood and shuts out all decay. Then lay the rods in their cases on a shelf in some room of moderate temperature. Standing them against a wall is a bad practice, as it tends to bend and set the wood.

"Reels must be carefully taken apart, cleaned of all rust and grit and oiled. Lines should be removed from the reels, first wiped off with a damp cloth, and when dry with an oiled one, and then wound on a flat board. Hooks should always be dipped in oil before being stored away, and grease will also keep the gut snells moist and pliable.

"Artificial flies require more care than all the rest of the outfit put together. A wash and a good rubbing with mink oil, and a coat of buffing bags, moths and shiners are on the lookout for the soft feathers and silks. Take every one out of the book, and after laying in the sun for a few hours to kill any chrysalis germs or eggs wrap in camphorated paper or in plain tissue paper, and sift thoroughly with powdered camphor gum. Then pack them away in a red cedar case if you have or can procure one and no roving vermin will disturb that outfit.

"With such care taken in time the angler will find at the opening of the next season that he has saved many a dollar, and all of his outfit is as good as ever, and some of it even better than when it was new, because of the seasoning."—New York Sun.

Life in Maryland in the Olden Times.

On the broad porch of the manor house of an afternoon the planter and his comely dame, seated in their rocking chairs, and young lovers cooed in the shade of the vine, while the tall clock in the hall ticked with the conscious dignity of leisure, and the sideboard in the dining room winked and blinked with all its cut glass decanters. The old tide water plantation had long been the domain of prosperity and peace; the granary, the meadow and the useful cellar were full; there were a horse and pig for every guest; pipes and juleps were free; old French brandy could be had for 8 shillings a gallon, and Madeira, port and sherry for 5 shillings; the four horse coach still jolted and creaked cheerily when the governor was to be met at the landing, and in the ancestral graveyard behind the house the "family" slept comfortable and close in their tall clock in the hall struck the time in its gentle, slow old way, time turned over drowsily and took an other nap, as though he had been since. "I paid," said Old Maryland Homes and Ways "in Century.

Richards' Remedy.

"Here," said Charon, "where are you going?" "Back," rejoined the shade. "I was electrocuted, but have been resuscitated." The best remedy given into the world was the story of the St. Louis. "This, O River," he exclaimed with marked asperity, "comes preloved to give us the double cross."—Detroit Tribune.

THE ADVOCATE.

IABIE GANS—A SONG.

(For the Advocate.)

There's a little vine-clad cottage
Nestled among its native haunts,
Near a just across the meadow lands,
In the days of which I'm dreaming,
A lover and his wife,
Who lived a little sweeter than Abbie Gans.

Oh, she was young and fair,
With the softest golden hair,
But the single came for her one day
And here he on their wings away—
My precious little sweetheart Abbie Gans.

We often met at even tide
To row upon the river,
And listen to the mocking birds at night,
And the melody of those dear days
Will cling to me forever,
And the music of her laughter hushed so soon.

Refra:—
On the meadow-way was winding
The road that led to their door,
And a clump of Hawthorn bushes grew
Between,
But the sweetest memories linger
Round the Hawthorn as we called here,
Where oft in summer twilight we were Soothed.

And now often in the gloaming,
While the mystic sounds of even
We hark the memory of those days,
And my heart is weeping waiting
For the summons home to heaven,
I still my darling's wailing, wistful ways.

Refra:—
October, 1894. —JAMES KENNEDY.

The New Court of Appeals.

"We have a new Court of Appeals. It is the profound wish of all men who care for the good name of the State that the new court will do much to counteract the influence of a long line of decisions from the old, under which crime has become one of the characteristics of Kentucky and punishment for crime one of the lost terrors. "Time was when no appeal was allowed in criminal cases, and to-day it is within the power of this one court following the law rather than its own sympathies, caring more for the protection of society than for the sufferings of those who have assailed it—to restore the good name of the State, to maintain the safeguards of life, and raise this community to the level of civilized communities elsewhere. "A suit for slander was brought in the Federal Court, and won. The disappointed litigant as he left the courtroom was joined by an intimate friend who said: "You ought to have killed that fellow and you would have been acquitted, as if you have to pay $5,000 in a damage suit. It is cheaper to kill a man than to slander him." "That," gentlemen of the Court of Appeals, is true, and true, mainly because of decisions, beginning back a generation ago, when drunkenness was first accepted as some sort of excuse for murder, and coming down to the later days, when on the most forced construction of badly drawn statutes, one murderer after another has been set free to become a hero to a set of hoodlums and a menace to all that is good in our social relations. "Every execution by a mob is a reflection on the Kentucky Court of Appeals. Courts are not constituted to shield criminals from the vengeance of society, but that the law may be a terror to evil-doers. "It has lost all such terrors. The men who dread the law are honest day laborers, or the men of business, who rather than enter the Court-house to maintain their rights, will yield one point after another, will compromise one issue after another, will surrender one privilege after another to the very limit of self-sacrifice, rather than become ensnared in the meshes of litigation; preyed upon under the forms of law before the Judges who have long denied the power thereof. "Three hundred years ago Hooker, "The man of innocent wisdom," wrote: "Of law there can be no less acknowledged than that her seat is in the bosom of God; her voice is the harmony of the world. All things in heaven and earth do her homage; the very least as feeling her care, and the greatest are not exempted from her power: Be ye angels and men and creatures of what condition soever, though each in different sort and manner, yet all with uniform consent, admitting her as the mother of their peace and joy." "It will be well for the State, when standing at your bar, reviewing the history of your honored tribunal, if such an apostrophe can be uttered by the litigants who turn to leave your courts. In Mt. Sterling the mob has scarcely scattered, but they brought a prisoner charged with one crime for another, when a Sheriff of the State shows his enemy in the back in Harrodsburg. A number of assassins met a wedding party on the public road, add murder to seduction, and no gallows has been yet erected, though for eighteen months the blood of the slain has cried for vengeance. To justify most flagrant usurpations in Ohio Judge reads the records of crime covering only a few months, and all over the State we see shown, not merely indifference to law, but a bold defiance of its requirements. The review of the last twenty-five years is not a pleasant one, but it is instructive. By the decisions of our courts capital punishment—save by the mob—has been abolished in this State. One trial after another is granted; one verdict after another is set aside; one witness after another is hurried from the State; one jury after another is dismissed until the people have come to believe that society is no right which a criminal is bound to respect, and the law has no obligations which the attorney for a murderer may not set aside. "That other cause conspire the decisions of our courts to degrade Kentucky is true, but it would be difficult exaggerate the influence of this high court on the progress of civilization in this State. For good or for evil it stands on a hill. It now enters upon a new era; pray God that it may be one of better times, of better things, of better men. May the honorable men who occupy the bench at time paraphrase the words of Ridley at the stake: "We shall this day light a candle, by God's grace, as I trust shall never be put out."—Louisville Post.

The Post reflects our sentiments to the letter. We once heard a Judge of our Circuit Court say to an attorney who was asking for a continuance: "If the lawyers would work as hard to get their cases ready for trial as they do to continue them our docket would be less cumbersome." Speedy justice, more than regard for lawyer's sympathy, for criminals is very much needed in Kentucky now.

At this time of the year and during this kind of weather the farmer should care for his milch cows if he expects a good flow. His hogs should be kept dry, but if they are not should be well fed. Especially should sheep receive proper attention. Poultry is profitable, but they must have a clean and warm house. It must be well-ventilated and corn at this time of year is the best food for them.

Too often the farmer is heard to say there is no money in cattle, hogs, horses, sheep, poultry, etc. They are mistaken. The demand for all of them are great, and in the proper condition the returns show reasonable profit, but the best results cannot be obtained without work, and to care and work properly a person must be paid as to what is best. Experience is a good but expensive teacher, and if you would learn quickly, accept the experience of others and improve on it if you can. There is not an idle moment for the successful man.

ENGLAND'S GREAT RECORD.

The Huge Volume, Which Contains the Debates of Parliament.

Hansard, in 459 volumes, cannot be considered light reading, and the lovers of such will not thereby be attracted to the University of Pennsylvania, which has come into possession of the series. But the tomes contain the debates of the English parliament for a period of 825 years, going back to the time of the Saxon origin, before the days of William Rufus and the wars of the roses. The historical student will not expect stenographic reports of the eloquence of those early times, for the art of verbatim reporting is quite modern, but something has been recovered which will pass for the official record, and the engulphing Hansard embraces it all, presenting a continuity of parliamentary discussion before which even such robust mass-men of research as Gibbon, Carlyle and Albertus Magnus might turn aside in confusion and despair. It is only in recent years that parliamentary speeches have been reported with anything like accuracy. Up to the close of the last century they were written out from memory by the drudges and day laborers of literature, sometimes men of genius, like old Sam Johnson. The reproduced speeches of both sides, taking care that "the Whig dogs should not get the best of it" and greatly mending the eloquence of the discourses which he preserved. Shortland came in with the beginning of the present century, but was not immediately perfected, and its early parliamentary and other records have a good deal of guesswork and conjectural interpolation in them, not always to the improvement of the original fabric. But for a long time the reports of parliament, like those of our own legislative chambers, have been of great accuracy, and they constitute a body of debate which in the importance of the subjects discussed and the lines of action radiating therefrom have never been equalled in the world.

The University of Pennsylvania is lucky in possessing so rare a treasure, exceeding in bulk the scrolls in which Manetho, priest of Sebennytus, preserved the memories of the Egyptian dynasties, besides being a good deal more interesting and important. Considering the mass of literature which these volumes contain, it is rather alarming to peruse what our own congressional eloquence will amount to in printed bulk at the end of the coming eight centuries. The forecast is entirely overwhelming, but the result, though not to be precisely defined, is inevitable unless some Cromwell arises to get down our parliamentary fabric and blow it abroad upon the winds as dust and stubble and some Omar to burn up the congressional and other libraries. In default of some such measure of limitation congressional bibliography will run into proportions beside which the serried ranks of Hansard will dwindle to naught and its expanding bulk constitute a menace to the stability of institutions which require such an amount of talk to keep them going.—New York Advertiser.

Blue Eyes Baffled.

Blue or light-colored eyes are popularly supposed to most frequently carry the baleful influence, and to counteract this blue beads are sometimes worn. Cases are cited of men able to overthrow a carriage merely by looking at it with their up a beam, and so on. It is said that the belief in the evil eye among Christians, Jews and Mohammedans is stronger even than their religious beliefs.

The peasants try to read good and bad luck from the color and growth of a horse's hair. This habit they seem to have got from the Bedouin Arabs, but are not so expert in the signs. A chestnut horse, for good luck, must have either both hind legs or else the near leg white. If only the off hind leg is white, that is bad luck. Then, by the way the hair grows on the neck, it is ascertained whether the owner will be killed by a spear or a dagger, and if a horse begins to dig with his feet that means that the owner is soon to be buried.—All the Year Round.

Tennyson and Wellington.

In Tennyson's ode on the death of the Duke of Wellington are the lines: Not one or twice in his fair island story The path of duty was the way to glory. The lines, thrice repeated, with slight variations, are a paraphrase of a remark of the Iron Duke which had deeply impressed the poet. Some one told Wellington that the word "glory" never occurred in his dispatches. "If glory had been my object," he answered, "the doing my duty must have been the means."

A Knave of Pompeii.

On the skeleton of a lady who died at Pompeii were found two golden bracelets, six of silver, four golden anklets, four earrings, 30 finger rings, a golden collar, a golden belt and a golden band on her head, while by her lay a purse containing 197 silver coins.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
Dr. G. C. Osason,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other harmful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
Dr. J. F. Kneelock,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is as well adapted to children that I recommend it as a superior remedy known to me."
Dr. A. Ayman, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Plantation colored people are often afflicted, as Dr. Fenner found when traveling in the south. Their diseases were painful.

Many of them had what they called "a rising under the jaw." This was a swelling of the parotid or submaxillary gland. He used with them, invariably, his Golden Relief, and relieved the pain and reduced the swelling almost immediately in every case. They called it "Golden Relief," a not inappropriate name. Dr. Fenner met a planter who informed him that and bacon on which his colored help subsisted, than Golden Relief, which he used to cure their aches, pains, summer complaints and flux. This Remedy cures any ailment which has inflammation and pain as its base, from a chronic bronchitis to a pulmonary consumption. Inflammation can no more exist in presence of this remedy than can the honey bee under the fumes of sulphur. No inflammation, no swelling, no pain, no bronchitis, no consumption. One tablespoonful does it in certain cases for La Grippe. No narcotics or mineral poisons in it. Safe and certain—never disappoints. Money refunded if satisfaction not given. Take a bottle home to-day.

The Central Kentucky Medical Association will meet at Danville this week.

William Taylor, colored, was hanged Friday at Richmond, for the murder of David C. Day, a white farmer.

William F. Schneider, formerly of this city, will be married on next Wednesday to Miss Grace Hocker, of Richmond.

Newton Lane, formerly of this city, fought with Judge George B. Kincaid in the lobby of the Phoenix Hotel, in Lexington, January 9.

John D. Poolefellow has just given Chicago University another present of $115,000. This is in addition to $500, 000 already donated.

Hopkinsville has a new $75,500 hotel. The proprietor is Mr. Hodge, of Atlanta, Ga. The hotel was opened with a grand banquet Thursday night.
